Nels Cline Singers (!!!) plus ROVA Sax Quartet Sun. 2/27 @ Windup Space

by Adam Hopkins on February 25, 2011

Nels Cline is currently my favorite guitar player. His band the Nels Cline Singers, which now includes Trevor Dunn (of Mr. Bungle, Fantomas, etc.) on bass in place of Devin Hoff, is the perfect mix of rock, jazz, and improvised freak-outs for my taste. It is really, really difficult to see Nels with this group due to his heavy touring schedule with the band Wilco, so I'm very excited to announce that Bernard Lyons of Creative Differences is bringing him to Baltimore this Sunday at the Windup Space. The concert will be a collaboration between the Singers and the ROVA Sax Quartet. This is the do-not-miss event of the year so far in Baltimore music. Speaking of don't miss, don't forget that we're bringing Andrew D'Angelo to the Windup Space next Tuesday, March 1 for FREE to perform with the collective. See you there as well...it's a good week for music in Bmore. Straight from Bernard, about the Nels show:

Sunday February 27 @ 7.30pm (doors at 6.30)

ROVA Saxophone Quartet meets Nels Cline Singers – The Celestial Septet

@ The WindUp Space,

12 W.North Ave Baltimore MD

Tickets are $20 <http://www.brownpapertickets.com/event/140980>

An all-star AvantJazz suoergroup performs its final concert!

The distinguished avant-garde sax quartet ROVA joins forces with the wild free jazz trio Nels Cline Singers (in which nobody sings, in case you wonder) to perform The Celestial Septet.

Concerts by this all star group are rare (in part due to Nels Cline's hectic schedule with Wilco). Tonight they finish off a 5 date U.S. tour with this exclusive area appearance. Fans of free-jazz,modern classical and out-rock should not miss this one! Advance tickets are advised.
