

THE NEW YORKER

May 1, 2005

Having recorded their own orchestrated version of John Coltrane's avant sonic boom "Ascension," which they did in 1995, the Rova Saxophone Quartet are obviously game for just about anything. The polish of this celebrated self-contained unit is matched only by their daring.

The New Yorker